KIYEV AIRCRAFT ASSEMBLY PLANT NO 473

KIYEV, USSR

Kiyev Aircraft Assembly Plant No 473 is located approximately 5 nautical miles (nm) west of the Dnepr River in the northwest suburbs of Kiyev, USSR, at 50-27-26N 30-23-35E (Figure 1). The plant is adjacent to Kiyev/Svyatoshino Airfield and is served by both roads and rail.

When first observed on the aircraft assembly plant contained approximately 1,383,500 square feet of floorspace. A comparison of the photography with the latest coverage of the plant, from (Figure 2), reveals a large amount of new construction. A subassembly/machine shop (item 7, Figure 3), two workshops (items 14 and 15), and expansion of the combination workshop and warehouse (item 6) have been completed. Construction in progress on these buildings was evident on also reveals additions to the final assembly hall (item 3) and to the subassembly section (item 4) in progress. The beginning of construction of these additions, which will ultimately double the size of the assembly building, was apparent on [redacted]. The workshop (item 8) was under construction at the time of [redacted] and appears to be nearing completion in [redacted].

The present floorspace of the plant is approximately 1,685,350 square feet; upon completion of the buildings and additions now under construction the floorspace will be approximately 2,007,500 square feet.

Kiyev/Svyatoshino Airfield serves the plant as a test and flyaway field. The airfield has a northwest/southeast concrete runway measuring approximately 6,000 by 285 feet. The runway was in an early stage of construction in [redacted] and appeared to be complete in [redacted]. The airfield is served by taxiways, one of which connects with the plant, and by parking/assembly aprons, which are in the final stages of construction. Aircraft observed at the field on [redacted] include one CUB/CAT, two COKE, and two COLT.
